A warm welcome in the railML community and good speed for developing your railML interface.

Do not hesitate to ask question if you don't find a solution in railML's wiki pages (http://wiki.railml.org).

It would be great if you could present your company and the interface during our next railML conference in Vienna (March 17th; registration is open via http://railml.org//index.php/naechstes-treffen.html).

Best regards,
