
Subject: Different wiki documentation for rs:places and tt:places

Hello,

while I was trying to add some information to the Wiki, I discovered that there is one common documentation page for the elements rs:places (vehicle/wagon/passenger) and tt:places (trainPart/formationTT/passengerUsage). In my opinion each of these elements should have its own page, because:

- tt:places has an additional attribute 'reservation', which is yet not mentioned
- both elements are used in a different context
- the given example refers only to rs:places

Since I assume that the splitting of this page is a major change, I wanted to ask the forum and the scheme coordinators in advance whether you agree with my suggestion.

Best regards
Christian Rößiger
