
Subject: Re: Ideas for the future development

Posted by Vasco Paul Kolmorgen on Mon, 29 Aug 2005 01:03:18 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

On Fri, 26 Aug 2005 14:20:40 +0200, "Wolfgang Keller"

<wolfgang.keller.nospam@gmx.de> wrote:

>> We should consider allowing German discussions in the newsgroup >> together with the option to write an English conclusion of the >> discussion thread or to translate important parts into English.
>
>> My opinion is to rather have a German discussion than no discussion at >> all. Again: we will / we must conclude important threads in English. But >> in order to "re-activate" the discussion, we should have German postings >> as well.
>>
>> I'd be interested in the opinion especially of the not German speaking >> readers regarding this point. What do you think?
>
> The standard usenet procedure would be to have have separate > sub-hierarchies for each language, i.e. railml.de.* etc.

I think, that the number of messages will be to less for such a division of the groups. Also we have the problem, that a english reade may read the german groups too for avoiding to discuss the same problems again. Or does anyone here has the time to translate discussions (or summaries) for the other language groups?

F'up to railml.misc

Best regards,

--

Dipl.-Ing. Vasco Paul Kolmorgen

RailML-Konsortium

Telefon: +49-351-46676939 Telefax: +49-351-46676940

Zeunerstrasse 38; D-01069 Dresden www.railml.org
