That is the point.

Your pre-defined element list: Cannot be extended easily if someone wants to have a new type.

My generic element list with enumeration attribute "type": Can easily be extended by using "other:...".

It is not a matter of a possible difference between 'contractor' and 'partner'. These should have been simple naming examples.

I do not want to discuss the different types relationships. I'd like to have an enumeration which one could extend without asking a scheme coordinator.

Dirk.
