Dear Colleagues,

as dicussed during our last meeting in Dresden the RailML-Wiki is now available. You will find it via http://wiki.railml.org; you may register and change to your favorite language.

Feel free to add articles regarding RailML and to the schemes. Please note, that the RailML-wiki shall be a encyclopedia to explain background information and to help new RailML-users for understanding RailML. For discussion you may use furthermore the related newsgroups via nntp://153.96.46.40 or for files the genesis pages at www.railml.org.

Feel free to comment or report bugs or possible improvements to webmaster@railml.org.

Best regards,
--
