Subject: Re: [railML2] Enhancing the <lock> element Posted by Michael Gruschwitz on Thu, 25 Mar 2021 12:52:32 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Dear all!

Am 25.02.2021 um 08:57 schrieb Torben Brand:

- > Reference to what the lock actually locks can be done either
- > from the lock or to the lock. In railML2.4nor extensions we
- > have the attribute @lockRef on the element <switch>,
- > <crossing> and the <derailer>. But you could also have a
- > subelement <takesControlOf> with an @ref attribute like in
- > railML3. What does the community prefer?

We prefer the solution to have the attribute @lockRef on the element <switch>, <crossing> and the <derailer> as it is implemented in the same manner on the <controllerRef>.

Best regards,

--

Michael Gruschwitz Bahnkonzept Dresden/Germany