Subject: Re: Mandatory braking in front of a steep gradient Posted by Christian Rahmig on Sat, 16 Mar 2013 12:11:52 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Dear Susanne.

Am 11.03.2013 16:20, schrieb Susanne Wunsch:

> I summarized the opinions from the conference in Trac ticket #227 [2]:

- >
- > During the last railML conference (2013-03-06) in Berlin the
- > discussion came to this aspect of the current speedChange
- > implementation:

>

- > If a goods train driver has not used its train brakes during a
- > specified time (e.g. last hour) it should do an "operational
- > braking" not until standstill, but to check, if the brakes work > properly.

>

This operation is indicated at the drivers timetable.

>

- > It seems, that the scenario is a very special German one, that is
- > covered by the German operational rules. Brake tests are done very
- > differently across other countries. It is not a general infrastructure
- > specific issue, but more an operational one.

>

- > Therefore the implementation of "mandatoryBraking" in the element
- > "speedChange" should be removed.

>

> railML partners should use an "any"-Attribute as a short-term solution.

>

- > For re-inventing this feature it should be modeled in another way.
- > There were no further proposals.

+1

> [2] http://trac.assembla.com/railML/ticket/227

Regards

--

Christian Rahmig railML.infrastructure coordinator